|------------------|--|
| Claim 1 | The path being arrayed solely along two opposed inner lines and two opposed outer lines. The terminals being generally planar with the plane of each terminal being generally perpendicular to the longitudinal axis of the connector housing, in combination with other limitations in the claim which is not found in the prior art reference of record. |
| Claims 6 and 24 | The terminal tails located in four distinct rows. The terminals being generally planar and provides equal path lengths through the connector between the printed circuit board and the printed circuit card, in combination with other limitations in the claim which is not found in the prior art reference of record. |
| Claims 14 and 32 | Terminal sets having a reference terminal in one cavity that extends to both sides of the slot. The reference terminals include a generally planar, plate-like body with the plane of the body being generally perpendicular to the longitudinal axis of the slot. A pair of flexible spring arms extending | upwardly from the body and a pair board contacts extending downwardly from the body, in combination with other limitations in the claim which is not found in the prior art reference of record.

Claims 16, 34 and 42 A plurality of conductive first and second terminals are mounted in the cavities with the first and second terminals being differently configured. The first terminals are defined as being generally planar. The board contacts for all the first and second terminals are arrayed solely in four lines parallel to the centerline. The four lines include the inner line and an outer line on each side of the centerline. Two board contacts extend from each cavity and the board contacts of the first terminals lie only in the inner lines and board contacts of the second terminals lie only in the outer lines, in combination with other limitations in the claim which is not found in the prior art reference of record.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
